Delaware's Scriator.
The majority report of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections in favor of senting Colonel DuPont as Senator from Delaware was presented in the Henate by Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, chairman of the committee. The minority report has been prepared by Mr. Turple, Lilies of all kinds, Ferns, Palms, ste. of Indiana. The report and accompanying documents presented, is a cor lusive argument in favor of the admission of Mr. DuPont. It was signed by all the Republican members. The sair difference between the Reublicans and Democratic members of the committee is that convening the Connected by telephor right of Governor Watson to hold assest in the Senate and exercise legislative functions, and at the same time to act as Governor, and review his acts as a leg-islator. The report of the committee demonstrates the fllegality and atter absundity of this position. Never before in the history of the country has such a claim been set up on behalf of any man it was never before done in Delaware and is clearly unconstitutional Mitchell will call up the report at an early day. He expects the tariff bill to be taken up soon to case that is not done the DuPont case will be kept before the Serute It seems to be regarded as certain that DuPout will be seated, as his entrance into the Senate would not make any difference in the control There DuPont is scated there will be ninety Senators and it will take forty six for i

The report begins with an arcount of the proceedings of the Delaw are Legisla-ture on the 9th of May, when, it is said, Mr DuPont was elected. It shows that In Joint Assembly the fregislature of that State numbers thirty members, sixteen of whom constitute a majority, and that at the il ne of the last election William I Walson, who had been elected a member of the State Senate and also Speaker of the Senate, was acting as Governor of the State leaving if he was not inditled to sit as a Senator, twenty nine legislators to constitute a Joint Assembly and making diffect a majority it is also shown that Mr DuPoint received if teen votes the committee concludes that the whoir question of the right of Mr DuPont to a seat in the Scoute, as Caim-

ed, tirus upon the single question Had Mr Watson, then holding and execute ng the office of Governor of the State of Delaware is right under the construct is fittle State and the lawof the land to exercise the office of lorit Asembly on Miss 9, 1895 to be ber constituting such foldt Associably and to vote therein for a United States Smatci

CLAPTER XXXIV We reached Alicante the 15th March, after a long, tedious voyage During this time I had ample opportunity for observing Moll but with little relief to my gloomy apprehensions | She rarely quitted her father s side, being now as symp thetic and considerate of him in his suffering; as before she had been thoughtless and indifferent. She had thoughtiess and indifferent she had even a gontle word of encountagement for him she was over kind had patient Only one o her spirit seemed to weary. That was when we had been beating about in the bay of Cadaz four days for the shade male to the bay of the contraction of the shade male to the bay of the contraction. a favorable gale to take us through the stracts. We were on deck she and I the ands flapping the musts idly above our

She was sweeter with the than ever she had been before, it seemed as if the love bred in her heart by marriage must expend itself upon some one But though this tenderness endeared her more to me it saddened met and I would have had her at her tricks once more, began to see that our happmess comes from within and not from without, and so fell despairing that ever this poor stricken heart of hers would be healed, which not me a repenting more singlered by than over the mischief I had helped

As no such entertainments were to be had, this being the season of Leon, which is observed very strictly in these parts Dawson contented himself with taking Moll out to visit the shops and here he speedily purchased a pair of clappors for her, a tambour for himself and a guitar for mo, though we were difficult to please for no clappers pleased Moll as those she had first bought, and at did seem to me that I could strike no bud a seal to his unstrument but they bud a sed in multiplicane

Then nothing would satisfy him but to go from one draper s to another seek mg a short skut a wasteloth and a round hat to Moll s taste which ended to his disappointment, for she could find to his disappointment, to said to that he are none like the old.

Strolling aimlessly through the nar the market that stands against the port And here, almost at the first step, Daw soff eat, hes my arm and nods toward the opposite side of the market place Some Moors were seated there in their white clothes, with bundles of young palm leaves planted up in various form of crowns, crosses and the like—which the people of this country do carry to church to be blessed on Palm Sunday-

quite natural that if she recognized in these Moors some old acquaintance of lcho she should desire to speak them We stole away to the port, and seat ing ourselves upon some timber there we looked upon the sea nigh upon half an hone without saying a word. Then turning to me, Dawson says she speak to us upon this matter, Kit, she speak to us upon the matter, At, we will say manght to her Buthf she say nothing I shall take it for a sign her heart is set upon going lack to Elche, and she would have it a scoret that we may not be disheartened in our other neonest."

so dall. About 5 the next morning I awoke by the door barsting suddonly open, and starting up in my bed I see Dawson at my side shaking in every hmb and his eyes wide with terror
"Moll's gone!" crees he and falls

a blubbering
Gone | says I, springing out of bed. "Tis not possible."
"She has not lain in her bed, and one saw her go forth last inght as the doors were classing, knowing her for a foreign er by her hood. "Come with me," adds he, laying his hand on a chair for support "I dare not go alone "Ayo I H go with ye Juck, but whither?"

whither?"
"Down to the sea,," says he hoarsely I stapped in the midst of dressing overcome by this fearful hint, for, knowing Miell's strong instale, the thought had never occurred to me that she might do away with herself. Yet now reflecting on her strange manner of late, especially her parting with us overnight, it seemed not so impossible overnight, it seemed not so impossible neither. For here, seeing the folly of our coming hither, desponding of any happiness in the future, was the speed lest way of ending a life that was bur densome to herself and a constant sor row to us. Nay, with her notions of poetic justice drawn from plays, she may have regarded this as the only atonement she could make her liusband, the only means of giving him back free may have regarded this as the only atonemout she could make her imsband, the only means of grying him back free dom to make a happier choice in marriage. With these conclusions taking shape I shuffled on my clothes, and then, with shaking four, we two, hanging to each other sharms for strength, made our way through the crooked streets to the sea, and then, seeing a group of men and women gutered of the water's edge some hitle distance from id, we dured not go farther, conceiving 'twes a dead hady they were regarding. But 'twee only a company of fishers examining their haul of fishes, as we presently perceived. So, somewhat cheered, we cast our eyes to the right and left, and seeing inclining to justify our fours, alwanced, along the coast to the very end, where it justs out into the sea, with great stones around to break the surf.

Here, them, with deadly apprehensions we perent, our dury a finding the rocks, holding our breath, cheduly stipt hold of one another by the hand, in terror of finding that we so eagerly searched—a 'head' warmane's wirt disprise to the read' warmane's wirt disprise to the read'.

finding that we so easyrly searched a hood, a woman's stirt clinging to the stones, a stiffeded hand thrust up from the lapping waters. Never may lifergue the sickening horror of the moment when oregoing out amid the rods. Then I persuaded Dawson to give up this horrid cearch and leturn to our po ada, when, if we found not Moll, we eacts, when, it we found not Moli, we might more justly canolinde she had gone to Eliche than put an end to her life, and though we could learn nothing of her at our into more than Dawson had already told me, yet our hopes were strengthened in the probability of find two her at Elebe by recollecting her. ing her at Elche by recollecting her earnest, secret conversation with the Moors, who might certainly have re turned to Elche in the night, they pre ferring that time for their journey as we knew So, having bushly snutched a repast, while our landloid was pro caring mules for our use, we set off across the plain, doing our best to chees each other on the way But I confess one thing damped my spirits exceeding ly, and that was having no but from Moll the night before of this project which then must have been fully ma tured in her mind, nor my writter word of explanation and encouragement For thinks I, she being no longer a gid dy heedless child ready to play any prank without regard to the conse quences, but a very considerate remorse-ful woman, would not put us to this anxioty without cause. Had she resolved to go to her friends at Elche she would. at least have comforted us with the hope of meeting her again, whereas this utter silence did point to a knowl edge on her part that we were sundered forever and that she could give us no hope but such as we might glean from uncertainty

uncertainty Arriving at Elehe, we made straight for the house of the morehant, Sidi ben Ahmjed, with whose family Moll had been so intimate previously. Here we were met by Sidi hunself who after laying his fingois across his lips and setting his hord, more his heart, in to, setting his hand upon his heart in to ken of recognition and respect asked us very civilly our business though with out any show of surprise at seeing us. But these Moors do pride themselves upon a store behavior at all times and make it a point to conceal any emotion they may feel so that men never can tinly judge of their feelings It occurred to us that if Moll were still living she had either returned to England or gone to Don Sancher at Toledo whose wise comisels she had ever held in high respect. The former supposition seemed to me the better grounded, for it was easy to understand how yearning for him night and day, she should at length abundon every sern ale and throw herhelf at his feet reck less of what might follow

Twas not inconsistent with her im pulsive character and that more reasonable view of life she had gained by exportence and the long reflections on her voyage bither. And that which sup norted my behof still more was that a fleet of four sail (us I k uned) had set forth for Lingland the morning after our arrival So now, finding on unquiry. that a carrier was to set out for Toledo that afternous I wrote a letter to Dom Sanchez telling him the circumstance of our loss and begging him to lot us

And now having disputched these

And now having disputence these letters, we had nothing to do but to await a reply, which, at the earliest, we could not expect to get before the end of the week Toledo being a good 80 English leagues distant. We waited in Aheante four days more, making seven in all from the day we lost Mell, and then, the suspense and terretard of metality becoming in and torment of mactivity becoming in supportable, we set out again for Eliche, the convection growing strong upon us, with reflection that we had little to hope from Don Sanchez Well, then we went about our search in Elche with all the slyness possible. in Elebe with all the alphees possible, prying here and there like a couple of thieves a robbing a henroest and put ing cross questions to every simple fellow we met—the best we could with our small knowledge of their tongue but all to no purpose and so another day was wasted. We lay under the palms that night, and in the morning began our perquisition afresh now hunting up and down the narrow lane and alleys of the town as we had scoured those of Alicante in vain, un til, persuaded of the uselessness of our on, penguado or the declessness of our quest, we agreed to return to Alicanto in the hope of finding there a lotter from Don Sanchez. But (not to leave a single stone unturned) we settled we would call once again on Sidi ben Ahmed and ask if he had any tidings to give us but openly feeling we were no mate for him at subterfuge. So to his house we went, where we were received very graciously by the old merchant who, chiding us gently for being in the neighborhood a whole day without giving him a call, prayed as to enter his unworthy parlor adding that we should did there a friend who would be very aciously by the old merchant who pleased to see us At this my heart bounded to such an extent that I could utter never a word (nor could Dawson either), for I expect ed nothing less than to find this frie was our dear Moll, and so, silent and haking with feverish anticipation, we and round the inner garden of his house by the smade till we reached a door way, and there lifting aside the heavy hangings, he bade us enter We pushed by him in rude haste, and than stopped of a sudden in blank amazement, for to find, we discovered only Do chez, sitting on some pillows and smoka Moorish chihouk.

"My daughter—my Moll!" cries Dawson in despair "Where is she?" "By thus time," replies Don Sanches rising, "your daughter should be in Barbary"

A very unexpected blizzard was that which began operations here about 2 this morning. In the evening the pale moon shone but later it clouded and about I it was spowing hard and later a blizzard began and is raging as we go to press, everal inches of snow having fallen. At 3 o'clock it thundered and lightened, quite remarkable for Feb. 20. West of here a terrific gale was raging and the telegraph wires were not work log for a time.
